Students are able to engage in conversation and comprehend another person's dialogue without much repetition. Topics go well beyond basic needs and include: personal and family affairs, current events, school, work, etc. Students can comprehend descriptions and narration referring to past, present, or future events. They can comprehend dialogue about special fields of interest and narratives of a non-technical or specialized nature. When listening to material restricted mainly to vocabulary and structures studied in class, their comprehension appears to be on a near native-like level. There is an increased comprehension of in-depth material about special interest topics used in class. Grammar control includes all the infrequently used and the most complex forms and word order problems. Students work toward building a larger reading, speaking, and listening vocabulary through use of materials representative of the German-speaking culture.

You will be assessed on oral and listening activities, vocabulary and grammar quizzes, homework, daily assignments, notebook checks, unit and/or lesson tests, semester exam, final exam, projects, and speaking the language in class. Learning a foreign language is best done through language acquisition. The best way to acquire a language is to actively listen, participate in class activities, and be present in class. Performance activities are required regularly (class presentation, role-playing, speaking in target language, etc.) as part of the classwork grade. As German rit t
